Dear _____

Is your hospital optimally prepared to care for a critically ill or injured pediatric patient?

The care of an acutely ill child in an emergency setting is one of the most stressful moments for any emergency department provider, particularly for community emergency department providers. Healthcare providers in these settings receive less frequent training in the care of critically ill pediatric patients.

To address this our team has created a program to help train your entire healthcare team in the emergency care of pediatric patients in your department. The Improving Pediatric Care Through Simulation (ImPACTS) program is a multidisciplinary team of Pediatric Emergency Medicine-trained physicians and nurses who are conducting simulation training interventions in community emergency departments, with the ultimate goal of improving pediatric patient outcomes. We believe this program will improve the emergency care provided to pediatric patients and improve outcomes for acutely ill and injured children.

Our mission is to work with you to enhance the pediatric emergency medicine training for all health care practitioners caring for ill and injured children. We hope this unique learning experience is of interest to you and if positively received, may open the door for a longer-term bi-directional relationship between our team and your institution!

If you are interested in having your institution participate in this FREE program we will send you more detailed information. We are available to discuss this project on the phone and/or in person with your ED leadership team.

Thank you for your time,
_____, on behalf of the ImPACTS Team
